THE

Once upon a time there was a young girl named
Tina

Tina! Can you please go to the grocery store for me?

And, with that, Tina decided to give the change back to her mom because it was simply the right thing to do. After doing so, Mommy said the following:

"Tina I am so proud of you!! Being careful means managing where your money goes and holding onto receipts to create a future budget. Because you were so responsible with the money, here is $5 for you!"

Tina's mommy realized that she was getting older and asked her if she can go to the grocery store to purchase some milk and eggs for breakfast.

Tina arrives home and suddenly two figments of her subconscious appear on both sides of her shoulder.

Figment #1: Tina! Give the change back to your mommy! She trusts you to be responsible with her money.

Figment #2: Tina you should keep the change for yourself! Do not give it to mommy. She won't even notice.

Figment #1

Figment #2

Tina said, "Yes Mommy! I would love to go."

And, Mommy responded back by saying, "Ok Tina. Here is $20. Please remember to bring back the receipt along with the change."

With that information, Tina left for the grocery store. At the grocery store Tina found the milk and eggs her mom asked for, went to the cashier, payed for the items, and leaves with the items along with the change and receipt.
